Q3. Has your child accessed our Critical Worker or Vulnerable on-site provision?

Q4. What are your feelings as parents/carers about your child/children returning to school from 8th March?

Positive responses to school reopening:

- We have faith that the staff will continue to do a fantastic job and do all they can to keep the children safe.
- Relieved that the government feels it is now safe enough to do so and happy for my child as she has been missing her friends and teachers so the social interaction will be very welcome. I do also trust that the school will maintain a safe level of social distancing and safety measures for all, as they have done so far.
- Happy
- Relief! Seriously though, I'm pleased they are returning and feel it's absolutely the right thing to do.
- I can't wait and neither can my daughter she misses interacting with other children
- In my opinion it is really good that children will be able to come back to school. We can't compare home learning to school learning. I think returning to school is good for children's health being as they can socialise and open up them self, for education purposes, and general daily routine.
- It cannot come quickly enough.
- I am happy and look forward to the school routine.
- Very positive. My children need face to face schooling and socialising.
- Relieved my child will be able to see her friends and teachers again.
- Both parents and child feel ready for the return to school on balance.
- Glad to get him back to school to have him socializing with his friends and some sort of normality.
- I am desperate for my child to return. I think the risk to my child is far greater from not attending school for months on end than it is from slightly higher exposure to the virus.
- Totally supportive of the decision
- Delighted
- Positive, I think the interaction with classmates again will be good
- Delighted, relieved, thankful.
- Looking forward to it
- Very glad for the children to go back to school. My kids are missing their friends and school so much and are so excited to be able to go back.
- Looking forward to it
- Can't wait, very happy
- I feel that the educational benefits are significant.
- Pleased but I will miss them
- Absolutely ecstatic!!
- Happy for them to be returning
- Schools should never have shut and let's hope it stays that way going forward
- We are fine with it

Q4. What are your feelings as parents/carers about your child/children returning to school from 8th March?

Concerns about school reopening:

- We are very pleased that schools are reopening. But anxious for our own child who struggles with school life.
- Mixed feeling really, school is 100% the best place for learning but concerned about social distancing and children mixing (appreciate social distancing of children is nearly impossible!) but also concerned for myself at pick up as parents in the playground previously did not observe social distancing!
- I do not feel 100% comfortable with the return to school but it is necessary and I hope other parents / children continue to stick to guidelines to keep the community safe. Parents should take more responsibility when it comes to sticking to bubbles outside of school as well - for example, not gathering in a packed playground after school when teachers are trying their best to stick to bubble systems within school.
- Nervous but happy
- Unsure
- A little anxious
- Very wary
- Apprehensive due to worry about stopping school again because of an outbreak
- It's too soon. Not happy with the decision!
- Somewhat apprehensive about a situation we can't control. Relieved she'll be getting to see her friends.
- Mainly pleased that they will be back where they belong. Slightly anxious as I was in Sept for the obvious reasons relating to Covid
- I am very pleased that my child is returning but am aware that I will need to support her with readjusting to school life after just a long period of absence.

Q7. What support (if any) do you feel would be helpful to ensure your child/ren's return to school is a positive one?

- I am not sure what support will look like but an increased focus on the teaching of reading - which I can see is now in place with RWI and for our own child support with social integration.
- My youngest may need some support in terms of building confidence in her own abilities again.
- It is not the learning side that worries my child, it is the social aspect that is the issue. Friendship groups have been lost over the past year and my child has no excitement or even desire to see their friends again. I believe the social aspect will need more focus than actual class learning in the short term.
- Personally I feel the children need some fun injected into the first weeks back with little pressure. I'm aware there is always fun in school, but perhaps some more fun activities to ease them back in without the pressure or worry that they may have fallen behind even though they've worked hard at home.
- Continued reassurance from teachers which has been great up to now
- I think any scary sights like masks, jumpy teachers, social distancing, and other restrictions will be very stressful for my child. If teachers and staff are welcoming and positive, I think my child will be OK.
- Give children time to express their feelings. They need a supportive environment that complies with the school values
- To ease them in slowly, allow social activities and ensure routines are discussed with them.

Q15. What issues, if any, have you had with Home Learning?

The majority of parents responded to state that there were no issues with accessing home learning:

- None, very pleased with the work provided and has been easy to use. I feel my child has really improved in his reading/writing/spelling in this time despite the situation.

Relevant comments where there had been any issues:

- Some technical issues during a home move but minor and during those days we did our own work on paper from printouts suggested in earlier lockdowns by the school.
- The work itself has been great. She would have loved more books to read. Mostly it's been fine, but I don't find live online sessions very productive and I don't think assessments of 5 year olds will be very accurate if done virtually. I know my child can do much more than she showed during her phonics assessment, but she was excited to get attention from her teacher and didn't really focus on the phonics in the time she was tested.
- Some issues with lack of personal feedback but now resolved and happy with feedback provided.
- The login , access to it and uploading the work in the beginning was a bit difficult.
- It took longer than 4 hours and we were sometimes stressed to get the tasks completed.
- Sometimes it takes a while to upload everything but other than that it's all been fine.

Q20. Do you have any other thoughts that you would like to share with school? If so, please indicate below. Please note that the school will only be able to respond to comments if you provide your child's name.

- I think a difficult situation has been handled well by the school again, as it was last year. The consistency of work each week has helped the children by knowing what to expect each day.
- I would just like to express my thanks for all that HWS staff have done during this time. Miss Byrne has uploaded happy engaging videos to aid with learning with feedback given on work everyday! Her dedication to year 5 has been amazing!
- Thank you to Miss Seaton for setting work that has been engaging and still progressed my child's learning/abilities whilst away from the classroom.
- I think there should be more engagement with groups of parents and opportunities to raise queries, concerns, ideas.
- It would be good if each year group could be kept as a bubble, so children would not need to self isolate if a child from a different year group tests positive for Covid.
- It would be beneficial if parents could receive more feedback about their child's reading performance.
- I think the whole teaching staff have been amazing in their ability to adapt to this situation. Credit to Mr Sheens & Mrs Albon for providing engaging lessons. We know that you all have families and responsibilities outside of teaching so appreciate how hard you have all worked. Thank you.
- Continue with health and safety measures. keep monitoring children , and make parents, as much as physically possible , wear masks etc. when picking their children up. communicate with children as much as possible, see how they feel.
- You have all done a fantastic job, the pre-recorded videos were good.
- My child has really valued the personal messages from his teacher and marking of his work.
- Thank you to Mrs Worby and the team for all your hard work.
- Very happy with the school work provided and the learning.
